The Caproni Ca.3 was an Italian heavy bomber of World War I and the post-war era. It was the definitive version of the series of aircraft that began with the Caproni Ca.1 in 1914.

Development and Operation.

Description.

The Caproni Ca.3 was an Italian heavy bomber of World War I and the post-war era. It was the definitive version of the series of aircraft that began with the Caproni Ca.1 in 1914. It was a three-engined biplane of wooden construction, with a fabric-covered frame.

The Caproni Ca.3 had a tricycle landing gear with a single wheel on the front and one wheel on the rear. The fuselage was of welded framework with a fabric covering. The wings were of wooden construction with a fabric covering.

Operational History.

Caproni Ca.3s were used mainly in bombing assaults above Austria-Hungary, hitting naval bases, railway junctions and troop concentrations. Outstanding actions involving the Ca.3 were the invasions over Austria, in 1918, and over Hungary in 1919. The Caproni Ca.3s were also used by British squadrons.

Survivors and Reproductions.

Several Caproni Ca.3s survive today, and are on display in various museums around the world. They are a testament to the early days of Italian aviation and the innovation that went into their design.

Conclusion.

The Caproni Ca.3 was an Italian heavy bomber of World War I and the post-war era. It was the definitive version of the series of aircraft that began with the Caproni Ca.1 in 1914. The Caproni Ca.3 was a significant development in the early days of military aviation, and its legacy can still be seen today in the museums and collections around the world.